The man was looking at her queerly. "By Jove, that's strange!" he said, low, as she finished.

Frances laughed teasingly. "Why, have you ever felt a message dancing about you?" she questioned Sommers shook his head.

"No, but the Roanoke did. It was very singular, I assure you. "To you." he answered. "To me!" she exclaimed, startled. he himself had been assaulted in the last desperate effort to keep him from witnessing the transfer of the gun to the tempering bath.

Finally he understood why France had come there that night. She must have suspected, and she had come to save him. The thought of the dastardly trick enraged him.

"It was killed in the tempering bath! I swear it was!" Sommers exclaimed fiercely. "Pinckney was in the room that night at the Durant works. He's here-here at this hotel. I'll settle He had taken a step when the secret service man caught him by the arm. "Easy, lad, easy!" he cautioned. "Don't lose your head! I've made investigations in Pittsburg, and I'm going to question Mr. Pinckney myself." With a desperate effort under the restraining hand Sommers regained his self control. His mind began to work again logically, shrewdly. He saw what he had to do and how he must help this friendly officer.

The Former Is Very Frequently Caused By the Other

The pneumo-gastric nerve connects the stomach region directly with the brain, and when the stomach is out of order the head is almost certain to be affected through reflex or sympathetic nervous irritation.

The headache of dyspepsia and indigestion is of every variety from the dullest and least defined to the most acute pain. Sometimes the whole ness of the brain seems racked with an guish; at others, the ache is confined to the back or front part of the head The first form is usually of a confused The first form is usually of a confused character, and is often accompanied by dimness of vision, and a mild vertigo, or so-called "rush of blood to the head." The victims of this symptom complain of a "swimming" or "lightness" in the head, and dizziness, or a sensation of motion while the body is still and speaks or fisches of light head.

The majority of people regard this headache as a separate disease, instead of a symptom of stomach-disease, which it usualy is; and they attempt to treat it separately, and make the mistake of endeavoring to obtain relief through the use of headache powders, tablets, pills and seltzers, the use of which is extremely dangerous, as many of them contain such powerful depressent drugs as acetanilid, phenacetine, antipyrine, caffeine, etc., acetine, antipyrine, caffeine, etc., which depress the heart, brain and nerve centers, and lower arterial pressure; and many a person with a weak heart has become dangerously ill shortly after taking one of these head-ache remedies. They also interfere with the digestive processes, and act-ually make the dyspepsia worse than
